

Where I Belong

Alkemyst

A lonely photograph, and fictions in my mind
And still the bitter taste of anger in my mouth
Oh why was I

Forsaken, was I made an orphan ?
Craving for a shelter
The love of a mother
Like a lullaby to comfort
A sweet voice in the darkest night
Chasing the frightening shades, keeping me safe and warm

Can someone tell me where I belong ?
Trapped in my stolen past, mind broken
You say you can't fix me
You say you're sorry
But how the hell do you think I can know who I am
If I don't know where I belong ?

Now I'm 34, and I feel it like a constant blow in my chest
Sometimes I do forget, but it's still here, prowling around me
I know she's out there somewhere
I need to know her name, see her face

Always asking, but the doors just won't open
Some secrets shall never be revealed
Civil servants say there's nothing to hope
"You'd better have to move on"
The law has cut the navel cord - forever

Can someone tell me where I belong ?
Stolen past - mind broken
You say you can't fix me
You say you're sorry
But how the hell do you think I can know who I am
If I don't know where I belong ?

A new-born child, unwanted
A burden, coming from nowhere
Bound to live the absence
Without hope
Without rest

Can someone tell me where I belong ?

Oh can someone tell me where I belong
Stolen past - mind broken
You say you can't fix me
You say you're sorry
But how the hell do you think I can know who I am
If I don't know where I belong ?

Why don't you tell me where I belong ?
Tell me, tell me please
Where I belong