

Headlights

Allman Brown

Driving late at night, old songs on the radio
Every single word, they're singing about you
Not a soul for miles around, just the headlights passing by
I don't mind, being lonely sometimes
Every now and then it feels alright

Now I'm running headlong to your door
Like I've done a thousand times before
Now I'm running headlong to your door
I don't wanna be lonely anymore

Pull up at our bar, nothing seems to change
In the flicker of the neon lights, I'll drink away the pain
Take a seat at the end of the bar, I'll keep a place for you
I don't mind, being lonely sometimes
Every now and then it feels alright

Now I'm running headlong to your door
Like I've done a thousand times before
Now I'm running headlong to your door
I don't wanna be lonely anymore

Baby, I'm just a fool, shouting shadows at the moon
Everything I've been through, I'm just trying to reach you

Now I'm running headlong to your door
Like I've done a thousand times before
Now I'm running headlong to your door
I don't wanna be lonely anymore
I don't wanna be lonely anymore
