

Wild flower blossoming
I beg of you, tell me this so I know too
Why do people fight?
They all act as if it's right
Don't they know, that's no way to live?

Valiant flower blossoming
What can you see, when you look down on me?
Why can't people say
That they're sorry for the way that they fought
I thought we once could

When the sky has cleared
And rains have passed
I still won't forget the past
You are not alone on your own
I remember you back then
Trembling in front of me
Crying deep inside silently

When you see loved ones withering
What do you do with your remaining time
When your leaves can't speak a word
And your thoughts cannot be heard
How do you convey your love?

Ahh

When the summer's sun is hiding and
Winds are harsh against our backs
Everything seems to overlap

I'll sing in your memory
All the times you've spent with me
We've lost your name but I'll sing for you