

Everything Has Its Time

Amanda Shires

There was a time
When it was hard for us to say "goodnight"
I was yours, you were mine
Kissing in the car underneath the streetlight
Now we just walk through the door
Turn out the light, and go to bed
Can't remember who we were before
Everything has its time
A beginning and an end of the line, then it's over
For worse or for better
Nothing lasts forever
Everything has its time
There was a time
When we would ride the subway to the city
Have a drink, stay out all night
You used to tell me I looked pretty
But now traffic is a nightmare

It's easier to stay inside
You're too tired to go anywhere
Everything has its time
A beginning and an end of the line, then it's over
For worse or for better
Nothing lasts forever
Everything has its time
Are we running out of (time)
Are we running out of (time)
We're running out of time
Everything has its time
A beginning and an end of the line, then it's over
For worse or for better
Nothing lasts forever
Everything has its
Everything has its
Everything has its time
