

The Game

Amaranthe

So many days we left aside
We sought fortune by the rainbow
We longed to turn the hourglass
For the future going under

As the earth kept from crashing down
One step from the edge
Where are you now?
An incessant machine
For one purpose it goes on and on and on

And the games you play
Can't stop the world from going under
We can chase the past
But we cannot save the seven wonders
I can't help myself from wondering
Where do we begin?
It's not a game, no
This is not a game

So many days were left behind
Without knowing where they're going
We saw the future through the glass
When we still believed in wonders

Now the world comes crashing down
One step from the edge
Where are we now?
An incessant machine
For one purpose it goes on and on and on

And the games you play
Can't stop the world from going under
We can chase the past
But we cannot save the seven wonders
I can't help myself from wondering
Where do we begin?
It's not a game, no
This is not a game

The games you play
Our indifference will cause a worldwide immolation
The price we pay
Is a constant, neverending flagration

And the games you play
Can't stop the world from going under
We can chase the past
But we cannot save the seven wonders
I can't help myself from wondering
Where do we begin?
It's not a game, no
This is not a game