

Something New

Amber Rubarth

When did the fire start to die?
It's been raining now for quite some time and so I travel down the road, yeah, find something new.
And as your silhouette shrinks down,
I feel my face grow a little frown that moves through the night into a lighter shade of blue.

and I fall for something new,
I'm falling for something new.
sunlight passed your shadow by,
left me craving such a bigger view.
I'm falling now for something new.

And it happens once again,
there is no fulfillment in the end.
I got this feeling that I'm doing something wrong.
But the cycle keeps its spin and faster now, it moves within me down through my every move and I can't keep still for long.

'til I fall for something new I'm falling for something new.
Sunlight passed your shadow by,
it left me craving such a bigger view.

Why do I keep on looking low?
I got it all right here
Why do I shut it out?
Why do I keep on looking low?
I got it all right here.
When the world's appetite starts drying out[?]

And I'll fall for something new Oh, I'm falling for something new.
And I fall for something new,
Oh, I'm falling for something new.

This time I will stand my ground and appreciate this perfect view.
I'm falling now for something new.
I'm falling now for something new.
I'm falling now for something new