

It's All Gone

Amigo The Devil

Does the hammer hit harder with a purpose?
Is it driven by the fear of the nail?
And the only death that's ever really worthless
Is a life without a story to tell

And all the jewels, all the gold
All the shame, even your name

It's all gone
It's all gone
It's all gone
It's all gone

You see, the Commodore and the cannibal
Are starving, and they both need to eat
But a civilized man will judge what he can
Until the ship drowns and men become meat

On the island where you'll find him
Deserted and bare to the bone
He finally understands why the cannibal's hands
Have the same blood as his own

When everything you knew has a new point of view
And suddenly the savage is you

It's all gone
It's all gone, gone
It's all gone
Yeah, it's all gone, gone, gone

Well, the river only moves in one direction
And the mountain will always sit still
But if one is made to cut through the other
It's only water at the bottom of the hill

When the only life that's ever really worthless
Is a death without a story to sell
When everyone's opinion is wrong to someone else
When empathy has all gone to hell

Oh, it's all gone
It's all gone
It's all gone, gone, gone
It's all gone
It's all gone
Yeah, it's all gone, gone, gone
It's all gone
It's all gone, gone, gone, gone, gone
