Champagne From A Straw

Andrea Corr

Midday in the underground,
There's a teenage girl selling music for her bed.
I'll be the one that you look upon
And thank your lucky stars
That you walk in your own shoes.

Clip clop past a sleeping bag And a woolly hat Lying open on the ground. Give money and sympathy, Hold your little girl Like you won't see her again.

Does anyone know, the places you go.

On a day like today
I drink champagne from a straw
And I get my own way,
He loves me above them all.
And there's no such thing as poor little rich girls
On a day like today.

I've got my all over tan And my tummy tuck, My two babies boy and girl. Big house in the country With expensive bags For my scary little dog.

My man sleeps around a bit, Keeps him from my bed, One less job for me to do. I'm the one you look up to And wish on every star For one day in my high shoes.

Can anyone hear, it's hollow in here.

On a day like today
I drink champagne from a straw
And I get my own way,
He chose me above them all
And there's no such thing as poor little rich girls
In a day like today. A day like today.

A day like today. A day like today...

Can anyone hear, it's hollow in here.

On a day like today
I drink champagne from a straw
And I get my own way,
He loves me above them all
And there's no such thing as poor little rich girls
On a day like today.

I drink champagne from a straw

And I get my own way,
He loves me above them all
And there's no such thing as poor little rich girls
On a day like today.
