Oh, hold your tongue, dear Sally, as i gang tae the town And I'll buy for you a jaunting car and a braw white muslin gow n

I'll buy for you a jaunting car and a braw white muslin gown And likewise a bonnie wee lap dog tae follow your jaunting car"

"Oh, the de'il gang wi' your lap dog, you jaunting cars and all For I'd rather hae a young man tae row me fae the wall Oh I'd rather hae a young man wi' no a penny at all Before that I'd hae an old man tae row me fae the wall

"For your pipes they're never in order, your chanter's no in tu ne

And I wish that the devil would hae you and put a young man int ae

your room

I wish that the devil would hae you and put a young man intae your room

For I'd rather have a young man wi' no penny at all"

And now the old man's dead and gone, but he's left her a gey fe

He's left tae her ten thousand pounds and all of his lands sae free

And likewise a bonnie wee lap dog tae follow her jaunting car

Oh and now she's gotten her young man wi' no a penny at all Aye now she's gotten her young man tae row her fae the wall But he's smashed her china cups and saucers; aye he's gone and broke them all

And he's killed her bonnie wee lap dog that followed her jaunting

car
