

Snowflakes

Angie Stone

A few kisses ago, you loved me
Took your pocket knife, carved our names on a tree
My heart skips a beat to whatever you say
What have I done to make you push me away

You are my focus, you're the air that I breathe
Can't imagine you with someone else other than me
You don't kiss me no more, and I need your energy
Tell me where will I fly to if you set me free

Stars fell like snowflakes on my head
Now there's emptiness in my bed
I still believe all the things you said
Though I can see the flowers are dead

But terrible lies and emptiness fills my soul
You were so warm, now you feel so cold
The last time we kissed, your eyes were open
Is this just a phase, I'm praying and hoping

(You) Failed me, I gave you the key
To the entry in my heart, you became part of me
Told you everything, I shared all my secrets with you
And the words you fed my soul, I pray to God that you

Stars fell like snowflakes on my head
Now there's emptiness in my bed
I still believe all the things you said
Though I can see the flowers are dead

Trampled on my heart, threw away the key
Since you went away, all I see
I can't even eat, I don't wanna sleep
But I see you in my dreams
I pray that you come back cuz I need you here
You can kiss away all my tears
Hold me in your arms, whisper in my ear
That will take away my fears

Stars fell like snowflakes on my head
Now there's emptiness in my bed
I still believe all the things you said
Though I can see the flowers are dead

Sleeping I called you to fill your song
Make you feel like it's snowing in the summertime, oh