

Interlude

Anne Clark

Through the dark descending day
To silence
To settle
The angry heart,
the blighted eye
At first the shocking,
now the tired lie
Is put aside
Brainwashed
Pain-cleansed
The arid place once filled to burst to cry
Now soft escaping
Slowly gentle sigh
Is all that's left
Of what was you and I