

The ground beneath me
It splits apart
And I'm chasing cracks
Back to my heart

No weight can crush
What's already numb
No sound can reach
Where feeling won't come
Trapped in this room the street lights dim
The sirens sing a howling hymn
No fire just endless gray
And every touch takes me further away

I can't feel the way they do
My blood's cold the ice cuts through
No fire can burn what's turned to stone
Everything I loved, I loved alone
Can't bleed the way they do
My heart is cold it's nothing new
No fire can burn what's turned to stone
Everything I loved, I loved alone
The ground beneath me
It splits apart
And I'm chasing cracks
Back to my heart
The streets are slick, ice rain cuts deep
While I walk through a city with a lack of sleep

Neon veins pulse
I'm lost to sight
In a city gilded with pyrite
Trapped in this room the street lights dim
The sirens sing a howling hymn
No fire just endless gray
And every touch takes me further away
I can't feel the way they do
My blood's cold the ice cuts through
No fire can burn what's turned to stone
Everything I loved, I loved alone
Can't bleed the way they do
My heart is cold it's nothing new
No fire can burn what's turned to stone
Everything I loved, I loved alone

No weight can crush what's already numb
No sound can reach where feeling won't come
A figure carved unmoving and cold
Forever fixed against my hold
No weight can crush what's already numb
No sound can reach where feeling won't come