I know there's no hope in holding up this weight.

It just won't float.

Man, I tried, but the tide.

It knows no sides.

If that's what's not fair, then what could be wrong with my lif e?

[If that's what's not fair, then what could be wrong with my li fe?]

Maybe she needs love to put the bottle down. Maybe she needs me to be around.

The pain in her stare is drawing me shapes oh, so fair.

The pain in her stare is making me wish I was there with something to declare.

We'll it's quite possible I won't make it out alive.

Because I'm quite sure that I could die.

Because what's best is what's left when nothing is left but the sound of the rain on your head, a woman asleep in your bed. Dreaming in my bed.

Something's got to happen. Now
