On a street I was used to seeing, the friends I was usually with
They were separating and even going on journeys
Searching for ourselves, being frightened by the loneliness
Passing those extremely boring days together

We can't see things that are straight ahead we're swaying from side to side
Passing through the waves of light that shine on each path

A dream that should have ended was still urging me on
Memories that had been cut up were starting to stir
With both hands, holding the love and time that had been restricted
For at least today only, they won't disappear

Worried about your surroundings, also worried about your appearance

Without knowing what is real, you're walking
The reason for your worry is that you want somebody to stop your completely forgotten depression

Carefully put away your cracked pride
You filled in the gap in your heart from talking so exaggeratedly

The time that had stopped is evening it shines on my future
In a night that will never come back again
Continuing to tell your story for as long as you like a song of forever and hope
Even if you only understand it for right now

I still have some way to go because this isn't the place where I'll stop
I was holding onto my foolish, immature feelings
Has it already been more than 10 years since the time I learned my ABCs?
Thinking something really young like, "I'll keep going like this forever"

In a train that has started moving because you are always here
I wonder if we'd meet again at that time and that place
I kept believing in my eyes that I might always be here
Strong as a flower that blooms on a beach
The light will always shine on my future
Soar higher

A dream that should have ended was still urging me on
Memories that had been cut up were starting to stir
With both hands, holding the love and time that had been restricted
For at least today only, they won't disappear

The time that had stopped is evening it shines on my future
In a night that will never come back again
Continuing to tell your story for as long as you like a song of forever and hope
Even if you only understand it for right now

The minute and hour hand that have continued moving
When I turn around to look, it seems like a terribly short time
From the time when I learned my ABCs to now
We were so young, we were just so young
