Last Bus

last bus sails away and night calls an end to another day no more you can do to fight the things you need to get you through someone to be strong some belief that on the way some peace could be found we're all the same as the last bus sails away last bus sails away and everything you were falls away only this remains always underneath our tired games clear-eyed or confused a quiet heart still feels the same angered or amused we're lost again as the last bus sails away

Arco