

The Unsung

Arms Like Yours

I've seen this place all too many times, and it's wearing thin
But you leave with a glance that I can't forget, and it burns i nto my very skin
It leaves a mark that won't go away

This isn't love, when you fly away to a place I cannot find
So spread your wings, come back to me or just leave and bury me
tonight

Take air into your wings and fly away
Finish what you started and bury me
But I'm slipping in over and over again
I'm aching for something I never had
But they said, she used to sing out to everyone
So I can't stop until she swells her chest and sings to me

This isn't love, when you fly away to a place I cannot find
tonight

Now the wind fills your wings, and you've buried my grave
Your song's in my ears and it still haunts me

Bury me tonight
