

Still Remembering (2016)

As It Is

My heart's as heavy, as these nights are long
And I curse these spaces between my fingers
Where for a time you belonged

And you'll find somebody new who's worth your time
Someone whose words sound better than mine
I'll hope to mend
Trying my best just to get by

Can you tell me what hurts more
Is it remembering, or forgetting
The past that once was ours?
Am I remembering, still remembering, or forgetting?

I've kept your portrait framed within my mind
It remains untouched of new paints and brushes
Yet still it changed over time

When you left, not without warning or regrets
Nothing would fill this hole in my chest
Here's your farewell
I wish you nothing but the best

Can you tell me what hurts more
Is it remembering, or forgetting
The past that once was ours?
Am I remembering, still remembering, or forgetting?

So, my love, goodbye
So, my love, goodbye

Tell me what hurts more
Is it remembering, or forgetting
The past that once was ours?
Am I remembering, still remembering
Can you tell me what hurts more
Is it remembering, or forgetting
The past that once was ours?
Am I remembering, still remembering
Or forgetting?
