

No Stone Unturned

Asaf Avidan

Here we sail on our goodbyes
Surrendering our sails
And though I drown in her blue eyes
Your echo never fails

I will paint the feathers black
I pull the rooster and the crow
And I will burn them on my back
To flatter you, to let you know

What's the use of falling
If every lesson learned
Is that every breath that I inhale
Without you is a stone unturned

And while our fingers tangle tight
Your knot was nevermore secure
And though we're drownin' in tonight
Tomorrow 's just as pure

I'll seal the worlds of every land
I will ignite this kindled glow
And I will carve them in my hand
And hold your face to let you know

What's the use of fallin'
If every lesson learned
Is that every breath that I inhale
Without you is a stone unturned

What's the use of fallin'
If every lesson learned
Is that every breath that I inhale
Without you is a stone unturned
Without you is a stone unturned
Without you is a stone unturned
