

Darkest Hour

Asher Monroe

Moments passing by, memories in my mind
Stop and stare to all that is around
Will I live another day, or dwell on past mistakes
The pain gets lifted, listen for the sound

Release your inhibition, follow your intuition
The breeze will lift you higher to the light

Like a candle in the wind
Weeping tears of joy and pain
With every breath, burn as long as it can
Like a candle in the wind
Dissolving into nothingness
With a hope to be someday reborn again

A father talked to a son
A murder victim on the run
Will he pledge his allegiance?
A fall into reason?
Fight it 'cause he can, eliminate of the dark
Looking for a fix, healing like a [?]
To take on the battle [?]
To fight the same [?] that have plagued the weak
Mirror, mirror, on the wall, taken through a time capsule
It feels like he's been there before
Out of body, out of mind
Will he make it out alive?
Maybe he's been given a second chance to make things right

Like a candle in the wind
Weeping tears of joy and pain
With every breath, burn as long as it can
Like a candle in the wind
Dissolving into nothingness
With a hope to be someday reborn again