

Searching

Assuming We Survive

I have this feeling of morning gloom
As I struggle out of my bed
And I'm staring out my dirty window

Got me thinking 'bout
Think about where I really wanna be
Somewhere I ain't currently
Think about where I really wanna go
Cause anywhere, anywhere but home

Make your bed, check your hair
Lock your door, keys in hand
Take your time, make your moves

And I don't wanna wake up like this again
I'm searching for someone that I can finally spend my entire life with
So if you're out there just know that I've been searching for you
Someone to call my own
'Cause my friends are never home

I'm getting drunk in the afternoon
While I'm sitting all alone
I'm pretty sure I'm not gonna see you

Got me thinking 'bout
Think about where I really wanna be
Somewhere I ain't currently
Think about where I really wanna go
I wish I was still at home

In my bed, nothing new
TV on, phone on you
Go to sleep, dream of you

And I don't wanna wake up like this again
I'm searching for someone that I can finally spend my entire life with
So if you're out there just know that I've been searching for you
Someone to call my own
Cause my friends are never home

Don't say sorry if you didn't need to
Don't make plans if you know you're gonna flake
Let's be honest I don't really need you
Held my breath for as long as I can take

And I don't wanna wake up
No, I don't wanna wake up, ever again

I don't wanna wake up like this again
I'm searching for someone that I can finally spend my entire life with
So if you're out there just know that I've been searching for you
Someone to call my own
'Cause my friends are never home

I don't wanna wake up like this again
I'm searching for someone that I can finally spend my entire life with
So if you're out there just know that I've been searching for you

Someone to call my own
'Cause my friends are never home
'Cause my friends are never home
My friends are never home
