

Love Again

Audrey Assad

I came from a summer that bled my heart dry
To hide in the shadow of a low-lying sky
In the wicked wild wind
In the wicked wild wind

I found you that winter, all wrapped up in cold
With ice on your lashes and frost on your nose
I needed a friend
Yes I needed a friend

Then you stole my heart and winter was not so lonely
I had you by my side and you were my one and only
At my bitter end, you taught me to love again

The snow gathered 'round us, it fell silently

We laughed like two children in the dark empty streets
It was better than spring
It was better than spring

When you stole my heart and winter was not so lonely
I had you by my side and you were my one and only
At my bitter end, you taught me to love again

Then you stole my heart and winter was not so lonely
I had you in my life and you were my one and only
At my bitter end
At my bitter end
When I needed a friend you taught me to love again
