

Shiloh

Audrey Assad

Deep down your eyes look
Haunted by grey ghosts
You live in your stories
Hunted by shadows
When pain comes to show you
What you'd rather not know
What will your heart do?
What will you let go?

May loving kindness
Calm the raging of the wound
May your healing
Be a clearing in the wood
May you breathe in
Deeper than you ever could before

See what you've lived through
So you can grieve it
And draw it towards you
Catch and release it

And now as your tears flow
Let them be cleansing
Washing your heart so
You can be mending

May loving kindness
Calm the raging of the wound

May your healing
Be a clearing in the wood
May you breathe in
Deeper than you ever could before

In every season
For every seed there's a time to grow
A time to grow through yesterday's curtains
Maybe you'll open a window, a window
So everything broken
Everything bleeding
Can be made whole
Can be made whole
Where everything shattered
Baby, you'll find your Shiloh
Your Shiloh

May loving kindness
Calm the raging of the wound
May your healing
Be a clearing in the wood
May you breathe in
Deeper than you ever could before
