

Friction

Avery Lynch

I miss letting you just sink in Never even noticed how deep we got
But now we're sitting on the surface
I don't even know the last time we fought
We got tired of losing all our battles while standing on the same side
And maybe we caused too much damage
We're supposed to call it, make it all stop

But I don't wanna say we're friends
Then lose touch just to end up wondering how we've been
And then what, we're just supposed to find someone
Who has exactly what we did
Without the friction
Without the friction

You miss me out of convenience
Always staying closer to the safest shore
So now I'm drowning by my lonesome
'Cause the risk of saving me you can't afford
And we grew fond of crashing currents
So much so that peace became a stranger
Well maybe we caused too much damage
We're supposed to call it, make it all stop

But I don't wanna say we're friends
Then lose touch just to end up wondering how we've been
And then what, we're just supposed to find someone
Who has exactly what we did
Without the friction
Without the friction

Do you think we're worth saving
Or do you cut straight to the ending
Do you think we're worth saving
Oh do you

But I don't wanna say we're friends
Then lose touch just to end up wondering how we've been
And then what, we're just supposed to find someone
Who has exactly what we did
Without the friction
Without the friction
Without the friction
