

Imperfected

Aviators

You were the light of morning's gold
After my shining moon
To find love without warning told
You'd take it all back soon
A sword blue as the night above
Its glow is cast aside
Perhaps a perfect image of
Your long abandoned bride

Now I see you
Through shattered glass
A broken past has tainted
Everything we built together
Throwing out the trials weathered
Timeless love has never changed
I'm not the same without you
Am I something unexpected
Still too human, imperfected

The moment when I saw you first
Feels not so long ago
An instant bond, a hidden curse
That festers deep below
The fire in your crimson crown
The spirit doubtless gold
I watched our home come falling down
As you left me in the cold

And all the memories fall apart
Like fragile sculpted works of art
Inside a mind I seem to find my cage
How does it feel to know I'm here
Could you sympathize my love, my fear
When you took my heart to build your golden age

Now I see you
Through shattered glass
A broken past has tainted
Everything we built together
Throwing out the trials weathered
Timeless love has never changed
I'm not the same without you
Am I something unexpected
Still too human, imperfected

And ceaseless
I'm torn into pieces
Reliving the last hours of what I called perfect
Pretending that the pain was worth it
With distance
You froze my existence
Locked inside a dream of loss I never wanted
My one love, you left me haunted

Now I see you
Through shattered glass
A broken past has tainted

Throwing out the trials weathered
Timeless love has never changed
I'm not the same without you
Am I something unexpected
Still too human, imperfected
