

Your Mind

Awake The Dreamer

Spring open the pretty thing you call a face
Cause deep down we know it's just a place
Where you create your tricks and ploys

I've hoped I could understand the signs
The winds picked up, now I can't find them

I've searched far and wide
Across oceans blue and mountains high
The backs of books and the deepest minds
Now it's safe to say I'm lost again and you know...

I wish I could open up your mind
And steal the tricks that I can't

Find The dagger's struck and the sun has set
But the horizon says "it's not over yet"
Your head is locked and your secrets kept where I can't find

I've gone through all stages of grief
But I can't release your skewered reveals
The blinking eye with a crooked smile
With certainty the memory won't leave

I've searched far and wide
Across oceans blue and mountains high
The backs of books and the deepest minds
Now it's safe to say I'm lost again and you know...

I wish I could open up your mind
And steal the tricks that I can't

Find The dagger's struck and the sun has set
But the horizon says "it's not over yet"
Your head is locked and your secrets kept where I can't find

You think your daggers struck
You think my sun has set I too have tricks up my sleeve It's not over yet

I wish I could open up your mind
And steal the tricks that I can't find
I wish I could open up your mind
And steal the tricks that I can't find

The dagger's struck and the sun has set
But the horizon says "it's not over yet"
Your head is locked and your secrets kept where I can't find

I wish I could open up your mind
And steal the tricks that I can't find
