I guess I had no reason, talking to you that way It's just so unexpected, seeing you here today Why now? Has it been long enough, for all the hurt to fade? Oh, how I'm Waiting for the day I guess I had no buisness, asking who your hangin 'round You like to keep your secrets, it's a lesson i've learnt now But you don't act like I feel nothing for your, and everyting's OK Oh, how I'm Waiting for the day Seems that you've been kind enough, to spare my innocence And let me keep my illusions safe from harm To think why friends revealed the truth, I'd leap to your defen Strange the way the cruellest cuts have come It's late, I guess I'll be going, but don't expect me to wish y ou well There's too much gone between us, whatever's left now I can't t ell But I know, there'll be a time when I won't crumble like today No I, won't feel like screaming out should I see you glance my way

Yes I might find some bright new future that you can't steal aw

Oh, how I'm Waiting for the day
