

When They Told Me

Ballyhoo!

That you had to go away
There was nothing I could do to keep you here
I was standing on the rooftop of a hospital in Baltimore
Losing my religion and my youth

I thought I'd never love again
And I did not even care to see my friends
How would I ever smile again
This depression is a monster
But I'm still alive to see the light of day

That I had to let you go
Words could not describe my feelings
You will never know standing on the rooftop of a hospital in Baltimore
Losing my religion and my youth

I thought I'd never love again
And I did not even care to see my friends
How would I ever smile again
This depression is a monster
But I'm still alive to see the light of day

I thought I'd never love again
And I did not even care to see my friends
How would I ever smile again
This depression is a monster
But I'm still alive to see the light of day
