

When Summer Falls Asleep

Bambix

I see you face up in the air brings back times when you were there you've never been away that long

I recall that hidden smile i didn't know why i cried 'cause i would see you back at home so why was i all alone?

All seasons weep
when summer falls asleep

On the table i put the plates "Hey, why are you too late, you know dinner's served at five"

I see the blue lights swing and sirenes that sing but i can't sing along false notes prolong

Your eyes were closed you mind far away resting for another shiny day humor, spontanity, you impressed me things you composed; laughing matters which you loved the most now a sign calls it all closed and now i see just how much you meant to me

Dear sunshine, he could be a butterfly at least you should have let him try Dear sunshine, will the good things stay if you believe in them every day.
