

So long since you caught the sunrise
Living in the dim light there inside your bedroom
No fun
Never any fireworks
Somehow everything blew up and made you heart burst

Wound up but going nowhere
It feels like all the world is pushing down
Outside it's starting over
And weeds like us are rising off the ground
Spring from a cracking sidewalk
There's still time to reinvent yourself
We all fall apart here sometimes
We all want to be from somewhere else

Come down
Everything is brand new
Looking like a sandbox we could run our hands through
So green and the river's so blue
I'll be on the west side bank here waiting for you

Wound up but going nowhere
It feels like all the world is pushing down
Outside it's starting over
And weeds like us are rising off the ground
Spring from a cracking sidewalk
There's still time to reinvent yourself
We all fall apart here sometimes
We all want to be from somewhere else

And I know that you're too good to go through what you've had to
But I don't know what to say now
I wish I knew how to make you okay
