

I Must

Basia

N how many ways can I still prove that I love you In spite of all the crazy tests that you had put me through how else am I to show you that I forgive you For countless indiscretions performed in style by you how many times you hope that I would ignore it When you commit another crime and kick my love to death now I see that things will have to change, right now Oh, things will have to change around here

how often do I have to say: not to worry When you do something stupid, simply just because you're vain how soon, you think, will come the time when you're sorry And you'll be crying after someone who knew you well

I still believe although I'm losing my patience Oh please don't shout 'cause if you mean it you can whisper too now I see that things will have to...

Things will have to change right now
Oh, things will have to change around here

what happened to your grand designs
What happened to "the first in line"
What happened to "we'll show them how"
What happened to "we'll lead the crowd"

I must, I have to remind you
I must, I have to remind you
I must, I have to remind you It's not too late to fix your life

it's not too late
There is still time
