

In Real Life There Is No Algebra

Beardfish

I'm waging war against me I'm trying to free my mind, you see I think I am quite insane Trying to find my reptile brain
But then I'm gonna nuke it Then I'm gonna send the motherfucker flying... byebye brain...

I looked into the eyes of an idiot and in him I saw myself People walking by, disgusted faces at a distance They seem to think they're better, Man you know that is a lie but it's hard to see a peer in one with whom you can't identify

I gazed into the eyes of the madman and I saw, and I saw, and I saw myself
All these little things we do, our way of life, We're babies, repeating everything we see, stem-celled from TV

Looking back I wonder if it was just a huge lack of discipline
That stopped me from ever learning algebra Maybe I'm just too dumb (monkey see, monkey do)

I've found my sole purpose I need to evolve, and fast when we talk, if I nod off smack my face, I won't be cross Teach me as you would a Teach me as you would a dog strapped to my lazy-chair sitting in the living room where I watch Discovery all day long Evolving as I sing this song:

I'm a Modern Einstein,
I'm a Modern Einstein
I'm a Modern Einstein,
I'm a Modern Einstein
I'm a Modern Einstein,
I'm a Modern Einstein
