

Evergreen

Bears In Trees

A crisp sip of air fills my whistling mouth
And the sun hits my neck - really feels like spring now
I feel the seasons passing dealing with winters doubts
A tree I see whilst glancing, flowers blooming reaching out

I'm not looking for elation like I've never seen
I just wanna feel evergreen

And as the days grow longer I hope that my mind won't falter
And that my eyes grow fonder of the daylight they receive Like these beautiful leaves, I can feel my patience growing
And I hope I will start glowing like the hot ash in the breeze

I'm not looking for deletion of my entropy
I just wanna feel evergreen, evergreen
Evergreen, evergreen

But I must possess the thought, that progress is a process
And it ain't one step backward if you rotate your axis
Realise that a slip up is just part of the practice
This is just my attempt to learn how to backflip

Be evergreen, evergreen

(Evergreen) As autumn's end causes my mind to wander (Evergreen) I must remember I am stronger like a flower through concrete
(Evergreen) And as winter draws closer, I must not respond desp ondent
(Evergreen) I must remember I am stronger like a flower through concrete
