BeatKing

Hey man! Shout out to Monster Boo for that mother fucking intro . That was like a dream song. Real nigga shit. Hey man, it's Club God 4 man. It's the mother fucking 4th one. Every year these mother fuckers get way, way, way more crucial. It's like the only album I did twice. Like... I wanted to drop this like last year on my birthday. I always drop Club God album on my birthday , but the underground cassette tape music was still so thick man. I had to let them mother fuckers breathe man. That mother fucker is everywhere. Every God damn publications; nigga rollings stone. Everybody saying that was like one of the hardest albums to drop. Period

You know what I'm saying? It's about 14, you know what I'm saying. So the album I was gonna drop 2014 was a whole completely different Club God 4 than the one that you're hearing now. You know what I'm saying? I just I record so much I was like, man I want to do some new shit. It's only a couple songs on on here that was on the first version from last year, and I still may release those songs. You know what I'm saying? Throughout this year. You know what I'm saying?

Probably gonna hold up the project and whatever, but shout out to all these new fans I've obtained. Am saying from that from underground houston man. What am saying about houston, a mean from underground cassette tape music man. Like it's a new. It's a new weird place now I'm in. I call it the "White Underground." It sounds like a movie, the "White Underground." It's a weird place, you know what I'm saying, but its dope man. You know what I'm saying? And then, last year I obtained a "White Underground", not so much of "White Underground" but you know just a different type of underground fan base. It's you got the retro side over here and then I kinda got the "White Underground" over here. And for the most part, those two fan bases, they don't know each other You know what I'm saying, some of them do and I call hoes the super fans they umm you know, they are Both fan basis but she crazy man, you know what I'm saying.
