

Outside Her Window Was the World

Bebo Norman

She took a broken piece of glass and held it in her hand
Sharp as razor and a wire from the ground
It was a broken piece of love that she had tried to cover up
And outside her window was the world

It was perfect summer start on the day it fell apart
Just a girl and all the world under the sun
But with a push and a turning lock he had frozen all the clocks
And outside her window was the world
So she was singing

Come on, Come on set free
All that is a prisoner inside of me
Come on, Come set fire
Burn through the wreckage, leave it all behind

No one told her there was a life waiting on the other side
And no one cried, oh no one cried, for the damage done
But on the day she realized that she was stronger than the lies
She broke through her window into the world
And she was singing

Hope is rising, hope is rising
Oh my soul is rising, oh my soul will rise

Come on, Come on set free
All that is a prisoner inside of me
Come on, come on set fire
Burn through the pain, set it on fire

And all along outside here window was the world
