

My Life Has Been a Song

Bee Gees

Sweet simple song of different lights and different shades
The sound of life erupts and fades
And all the world must play along
My life has been a song

Here as I sleep, the love I dream will gently creep
Inside my heart I softly keep
The tune that plays too long
My life has been a song

Every sound in my head
Every word that I said is like a melody, melody
That no little person like me could ever change
Every sound in the street
All the cold and the heat is like a symphony, symphony
Which has never before been rearranged

Sweet simple song of different lights and different shades
The sound of life erupts and fades
And all the world must play along
My life has been a song

Every sound in my head
Every word that I said is like a melody, melody, melody
That no little person like me could ever change
Every sound in the street
All the cold and the heat is like a symphony, symphony, symphony
Which has never before been rearranged

Sweet simple song of different lights and different shades
The sound of life erupts and fades
And all the world must play along
My life has been a song

Every sound in my head
Every word that I said is like a melody, melody, melody
That no little person like me could ever change
Every sound in the street
All the cold and the heat is like a symphony, symphony, symphony
Which has never before been rearranged
