Sweet simple song of different lights and different shades
The sound of life erupts and fades
And all the world must play along
My life has been a song

Here as I sleep, the love I dream will gently creep Inside my heart I softly keep The tune that plays too long My life has been a song

Every sound in my head

Every word that I said is like a melody, melody

That no little person like me could ever change

Every sound in the street

All the cold and the heat is like a symphony, symphony

Which has never before been rearranged

Sweet simple song of different lights and different shades The sound of life erupts and fades And all the world must play along My life has been a song

Every sound in my head

Every word that I said is like a melody, melody, melody

That no little person like me could ever change

Every sound in the street

All the cold and the heat is like a symphony, symphon

Y

Which has never before been rearranged

Sweet simple song of different lights and different shades The sound of life erupts and fades And all the world must play along My life has been a song

Every sound in my head

Every word that I said is like a melody, melody, melody

That no little person like me could ever change

Every sound in the street

All the cold and the heat is like a symphony, symphony

Which has never before been rearranged