I'm Waking Up to Us

Belle and Sebastian

I need someone to take some joy in something I do You need a man who's either rich or losing a screw You know I love you here's the irony You're going to walk away intact I think you never liked me anyway You like yourself and you like Men to kiss your arse Expensive clothes Please stop me there I think I'm waking up to us We're a disaster You don't want to know me 'cause you move in circles of the brave Where art defines their lives

She was the one love of my life, and I let her go And if I look like death today Then please let her know I never wanted to do harm to her I only wanted her to see The beauty of the world surrounding her But when she opened up her eyes It's much too late Our chance has gone She's with a guy Who takes the price for everything I ever showed her Digging all the fun Because she's older I fed her with a spoon I made her mother smile I helped the kid survive

She was the one love of my life She showed me the road I loved her dog, her steady gaze, the chapter is closed I always wanted all the best for her The best thing was to stay away She grew up and she left the rest of us And now the understanding's gone I haven't changed, how could I I'm pretty much the same person I cannot keep the anger hidden anymore But lucky for you, you are not around My anger turns to pity and to love The season has arrived The season has arrived
