

Sister Buddha

Belle and Sebastian

Sister Buddha takes the all-night bus
Sister Buddha looking for the thing that makes her buzz
Sister Buddha wakes up far from home
And all she knows

There's an itch that she's dying to scratch
Her face, it glows, her skin

You step across the lonely threshold of your selfish mind
And embrace the loving goodness of your humankind
And if God won't show her face
Fall upon your inner soul's embrace
And I'll send you all the love that I can find

Sister Buddha checking out the scene
Sister Buddha works the catwalk, serves the coffee bean
Sister Buddha ran the streets with all the usual boys
But there has to be more than the thrills that fills the circus ring

Step across the lonely threshold of your selfish mind
And embrace the wayward goodness of your humankind
And if God won't show her face
Fall upon your lonely soul's embrace
And I'll send you all the prayers that I can find

And if God won't show her face
Fall upon your loving soul's embrace
And I'll send you all the love that I can find
