Default

Ben Kessler

There's static on my TV
I feel it feels the friction from the couch
It's like your thoughts are in my bloodstream
Deleting words before they even leave my mouth
There's things I'd never tell you
I hate the way that you pick up the phone, mm-hmm
And all your fears you never worked through
It must mean something that I'm different alone

There's versions of me fighting layers of you
Let you pick at the seams, I'd rewrite myself for you

Factory reset
If I change all of my default settings
Would I be someone you need then?
Want you to want me when I'm not pretending
Forget all of your feelings
If I let you see straight through my skin
Factory reset
Want you to want me when I'm not pretending

I could string the words together
I could say 'em just the way you wanna hear
But I'm stumbling through the letters
I glitch when I feel tethered
Will you still be standing here when

I factory reset
If I change all of my default settings
Would I be someone you need then?
Want you to want me when I'm not pretending
Forget all of your feelings
If I let you see straight through my skin
Factory reset
Want you to want me when I'm not pretending

Just rip all of my wires out
See how long it takes 'til I shut down
Twist me 'til the truth falls out
Don't call me when you're guilty now
Just rip all of my wires out
See how long it takes 'til I shut down
Twist me 'til the truth falls out
Don't call me when you're guilty now

Factory reset
If I change all of my default settings
Would I be someone you need then? (Be someone you need then)
Want you to want me when I'm not pretending
Forget all of your feelings
If I let you see straight through my skin
Factory reset
Want you to want me when I'm not pretending