

Tell Me You Started to Pray

Benjamin Francis Leftwich

You tell me, you've started, praying all the time and you keep me on your mind

When traffic is slow and the dead rain hits the window

I am sorry to say, it is taking time just to get it right

It is easy to see, when my walls are up, I can know no luck

Won't you wait? Baby, won't you wait?

You tell me, you've started, searching for a meaning in words t hat I've been speaking

And barely getting through, there is still so much I wanna say to you

You show me, I could be poison free, and I now believe in the b eauty of a thorn

Sinking in as the blood is drawn

Won't you wait? Baby, won't you wait?

I'm over the hillside like every day

How many times can I say?

I promise tomorrow I'm turning the page

I see why you started to pray

Wait, wait, wait, wait

Baby, won't you wait?
