

O'dea

Benjamin Tod

Your chest is caving in feels like all your sadness has burrowed

Deep in your lungs and you're standing bent like a willow

And a friend once said that I'll always see you tomorrow

But tomorrow's gone and we're face to face in the snow

O'Dea hee why does everybody I know die

O'Dea hee when your feeling lonesome so am I

O'Dea hee I will bid you farewell if you oblige

But I will never say goodbye

I'll see you on down the line

And I look in your eyes and I begin to see through

That burning flame that binds the darkness inside you

And I see myself and the darkness swallowed by a sea of blue

Then you turn your head and your face meets someone new

O'Dea hee why does everybody I know die

O'Dea hee when your feeling lonesome so am I

O'Dea hee I will bid you farewell if you oblige

But I will never say goodbye

I'll see you on down the line
