

Savior

Beth Crowley

No it's nothing new
I see angels and devils and heaven and hell when I look at you
I try to escape but your lies are more real to me than the truth
h
That's how it's always been
Now you're begging me
'Cause your mind is a cage and you say I'm the one who can set you free
So wrapped up in your pain that you can't see the chains that are binding me
I've got demons of my own

I'm not your savior
I'm just trying to keep my head above the water
I won't sacrifice myself to make you stronger
When I know you'd never do the same for me
Save yourself and finally let me breathe

You're unsatisfied
So you wave your mistakes right in front of my face like you think they're mine
You won't take the blame but somehow still expect me to sympathize
I can't let you bring me down

I'm not your savior
I'm just trying to keep my head above the water
I won't sacrifice myself to make you stronger
When I know you'd never do the same for me
Save yourself and finally let me breathe

You buried yourself so far in the ground
I offered a hand to pull you back out
But your misery just wanted company
I'm not your savior
I'm not your savior
No, not this time

I'm not your savior
I'm just trying to keep my head above the water
I won't sacrifice myself to make you stronger
When I know you'd never do the same for me
Save yourself and finally let me breathe
