

Your Bright Future

Bill Mallonee

There's this little piece of you
I may never see again
There's a bigger piece of me
That's simply vanishing

There's a little scrap of memory
Sleeping next to your truth
It's all curled around your body
And i cannot shake it loose

You park your van you feel again
You scratch your skin pick up your pen

I am afraid what did i pay
To stand up here and play the fool

I'm losing myself and i know i'm losing you

Something you'll remember
Something you once knew
Why bring it all up to the light
Except when it's killing you

A bridge to build an act of will
Some time to kill a soul to fill

Your bright future stares me down
You'll bury all you lose
Your winter sun she breaks upon
Those skies of cobalt blue
