She Wanted More

Billy Gilman

Well, we met one night on the brink of July,
The sun had gone down, but the moon was so high
I could see her face, what a beautiful face
We talked like we had a lot to make up
We touched like there was never enough
And the time flew by, and then we said good-bye

I still love her, I still miss her
I still wish she'd stayed forever
I tired to give her everything
That she was searching for
But she wanted more

It was the summer of bonfires down by the beach
Never thought her heart was out of my reach
Then tomorrow came and everything changed
Then the wind turned cold like a promise forgets
But I hold onto every word that she said cause that's all I have and that's all she left

I still love her, I still miss her
I still wish shed stayed forever
I tired to give her everything
That she was searching for
But she wanted more

More than she could find in my arms
More than my world
More then this little town
I wonder if she found it

I still love her, I still miss her
I still wish shed stayed forever
I tired to give her everything
That she was searching for
But she wanted more
She wanted more

I tried to tell her, I tried to say
I Love You, I Love You

Its not good enough, no, no
