

The Same Again

Billy Howerdel

Promise of a time
I'd find out the workings of a mind
I never learned to navigate
All things said still haunt me to this day
They endlessly ruminate

It's been such, such a long time
But I'd wait until
The frogs fall from the skies for us to be
The same again
It's been such, such a long time
But I'd wait until
The stars fall from the skies for us to be
The same again (The same again)

It's been such, such a long time

Choking on the lines
Clearly never worth the time
To stress upon or contemplate
But all the things said still smolder to this day
They endlessly ruminate

It's been such, such a long time
But I'd wait until
The stars fall from the skies for us to be
The same again
It's been such, such a long time
But I'd wait until
The frogs fall from the skies for us to be
The same again
