

Prelude

Billy Woods

"You're a man who understands history, right? If you want to start a revolution, why not issue a manifesto? Why not show the people who you are, what you're doing?"

"That's perfectly understandable. Socrates wrote nothing down. Neither did Jesus. You see the problem with text is that it assumes it's own reality. It cannot answer, and it cannot explain."

"So if you want it to be effective, you leave no trace, right?"

"That's right."

"Describe him."

"But this was 10 years ago."

"Would you happen to have a photo of him?"

"He would never allow himself to be photographed."
