Into The Black

Birdeatsbaby

We lost your face in clouds of blue We met your friends and the people you knew But they were like shadows and emptiness They like to remember what you try to forget

The season was summer when we passed through the town
They opened their hearts to us while we played to the crowd
We pray for remembrance or just for the couch
From one hand to another we fade into the black