

Cathedrals

Birds in Row

How many years since I last saw you, the innocence in my closet
?

It doesn't mean more since you are gone

Keep watching: I failed you at shining, I failed you at breathing,
I failed you at growing alone

f*ck your purity

You still punish me with a smile

Hundred nails on your casket and you still punish me with a smile

Always learn

On the wrong side of the beam, a bunch of rafters to unravel

The carpenters of the unseen destroying frameworks of evil

Always burn it all to the ground When it speaks in tongues of faith and rust

We're cathedrals in flames, we're cathedrals of dust

When I fight for myself I can fight for us

You punished me with a smile

I once was your slave, once your lover, once a fraud, once your mirror

A smile to hide the insides, as if our insides had limits

I'm drooling, I'm sweating, I'm pissing, I'm shitting my feelings on green carpets of love In your Eden of teeth

It's our garden now, I see no forbidden fruit

It's our garden now, I see no necks under your boots

I'll feel at home again

Millions of hands craft the gates of a world to change

Under silver wings, angels of abandon still dancing

They dance and they'll never stop

We'll live of all the things we don't know we ignore

The angels of abandon, they'll be waiting some more

Fight for us