

I Buried Us

Blackbriar

I got lost in the garden
And crossed a boundary
Where garden meets wilderness
I felt the shift profoundly
We would've been unlikely
We would've been fractious
And in my mind, I buried us
Right beneath the Taxus

Lying side-by-side after life
I feel my rotten heart burn as I yearn
To feel some warmth, to be alive
In my mind, I buried us side-by-side

We belong to the earth now (We belong to the earth now)
Right beneath the Taxus (Right beneath the Taxus)
In the land of what-ifs
Would we have been too fractious?
Or wonderfully unlikely? (Or wonderfully unlikely?)
Would we have shone brightly? (Would we have shone brightly?)
Whenever I close my eyes
We're still dancing in the afterlife

Buried side-by-side after life
I feel my rotten heart burn as I yearn
To feel some warmth, to be alive
In my mind, I buried us
In my mind, I buried us
In my mind, I buried us side-by-side

There was much haste, there was no time
No eulogy, no wake
But I've been silently humming our threnody
And weeping while walking away
Away, away, away

We got lost in the garden (Lost in the garden)
And crossed a boundary (Crossed a boundary)
And when you crossed mine
I felt the shift profoundly

Buried side-by-side after life
I feel my rotten heart burn as I yearn
To feel some warmth, to be alive
In my mind, I buried us
In my mind, I buried us
In my mind, I buried us side-by-side

Oh, I've been silently humming our threnody
And weeping while walking away
I've been silently humming our threnody
And weeping while walking away
