

Confidence

Blake Rose

You were like the antidote to all that I've been missing
But now I realise I'm not the only one you're kissing

We were laying in the car park
Of your dad's front yard where he lives like heaven
It's a long way down dreaming 'bout a future
Like we're two adolescents, you used to keep me guessing

Yeah, I'm almost gone, gone, gone

But I guess I lack the confidence to know I should start running
And sail this boat away from you 'cause I never saw it coming
Yeah, you were like the antidote to all that I've been missing
But now I realise I'm not the only one you're kissing

(You know I love you, right?)

She told me in the kitchen light with hands on her stomach
'Cause mine's in the sink
Curl up my lips and wishful think
And you've got your mother's eyes and you feel guilty for it
She taught you the lesson, so why do you keep me guessing?
(Guessing)

Yeah, I'm almost gone, gone, gone, gone

And I guess I lack the confidence to know I should start running
And sail this boat away from you 'cause I never saw it coming
Yeah, you were like the antidote to all that I've been missing
But now I realise I'm not the only one you're kissing

Not the only one

No, ooh

Yeah, you were like the antidote to all that I've been missing
And now I realise I'm not the only one you're kissing
And now I realise I'm not the only one you're kissing
